Professional Profile

Tim is currently supporting the Primary Care Robotic Process Automation project for Lancashire and South Cumbria ICB as clinical lead for the project. He was also a practising GP for nearly 30 years up to 2022. He has over 25 years' experience in Primary Care Informatics at a practice, health community and regional level. Tim's primary focus has been on the effective co-ordination of care across organisational boundaries within local health communities.

Tim has extensive experience in the creation of end-to-end digital clinical pathways between primary care and other providers, agreeing the content with stakeholders, creating the data set, the appropriate data collection templates and presentation of the data tailored to the various end users. In the course of this work, Tim has successfully delivered health community wide EPaCCs and frailty solutions which have significantly improved outcomes. He has also been involved in clinical document template design, document management, patient record access, primary care order comms, digital solutions to support the management of high intensity users and advice and guidance.

All of these have been underpinned by effective stakeholder engagement at multiple levels. Efficient governance has also been pivotal to a successful delivery. Tim has embed digital solutions to several management and governance challenges including IG management (Information Sharing Gateway), hardware management and stakeholder engagement (around procurement and more generally). All of these have promoted better understanding with stakeholders and eased the implementation of many other projects.
